

AC-8: System Use Notification

Personal Note:

There were issues with implementation of this control. A coding method was attempted to be created, but was proven to not be successful.

When MYSQL scripts were made, they would only run through the terminal and only run the most minimal information.

In conclusion there was no concise way of implementing a notification system to inform the user nor are there any plugins available to ease the process. There were limitations with scope of the project only including SQL, and not other coding languages.